In years when both chambers of the Virginia General Assembly were up for elections, the previous record for women general election candidates was 45 (36D; 9R), set in 2015. The record for women candidates for the Virginia Senate was 14, first set in 2007 and again in 2015, while the previous record for House of Delegates candidates was 52, set in 2017 when there were no Virginia Senate elections.

Currently, there are 37 (29D; 8R) women in the Virginia legislature, making up 26.4% of all members. In the Senate, women hold 10 (7D; 3R) seats, or 25%, while in the House, women hold 27 (22D; 5R) seats, or 27%. Virginia ranks 32nd among the 50 states in our rankings for women's representation in state legislatures.

About CAWP

The Center for American Women and Politics (CAWP), a unit of the Eagleton Institute of Politics at Rutgers-New Brunswick, is nationally recognized as the leading source of scholarly research and current data about American women's political participation. Its mission is to promote greater knowledge and understanding about women's participation in politics and government and to enhance women's influence and leadership in public life. CAWP's education and outreach programs translate research findings into action, addressing women's under-representation in political leadership with effective, imaginative programs serving a variety of audiences. As the world has watched Americans considering female candidates for the nation's highest offices, CAWP's over four decades of analyzing and interpreting women's participation in American politics have provided a foundation and context for the discussion.
